

LLOYD MCCARTER

and The Honky Tonk Revival

Raised in the poetry of old time twang Lloyd McCarter has been immersed in traditional country music his entire life.

Lloyd's mother and father were both from musical families, Lloyd's destiny was set into motion when the two families were joined by their love of music. At The budding age of eight Lloyd started to play guitar. Spending every weekend in a VFW or small town bar room, Lloyd would occasionally sing or play along until he would fall asleep against the speakers that were emitting honky-tonk lullabies sung by his father. Fresh out of high school Lloyd joined a touring act playing pedal steel.

After seven years Lloyd decided to live without fear and began an uncertain journey to pursue his true calling. Honky-tonk. Not for money or fame, but to keep the legacy of his family and of his honky tonk heroes alive. Whether selling out a dive bar, theater, or headlining a music festival Lloyd's combination of great showmanship, musical prowess and traditional country style always leaves the crowd eager for the next show.

Lloyd McCarter is the real deal!
